

LAW, J.D. (TWO-YEAR FOR FOREIGN LAWYERS)

Saint Louis University School of Law offers the Two-year J.D. for Foreign Lawyers program, enabling highly qualified candidates who have received their first degree in law outside of the United States to earn their Juris Doctor in four semesters by granting them advanced standing based on their prior law studies.

The two-year J.D. is designed for foreign lawyers who would like to enhance their professional training by earning the same degree held by U.S. lawyers but in a shorter amount of time.

Program Highlights

- Two-year J.D. students attend classes with students in the traditional J.D. program and can participate fully in other academic and co-curricular opportunities.
- In addition to earning a credential that may enhance the candidate's home country practice, a two-year J.D. candidate may sit for the bar in any U.S. state after successfully completing the program. Additional eligibility requirements must be satisfied in all states.

Curriculum Overview

Applicants admitted to the program will be granted advanced standing and may be permitted to transfer up to 29 credits earned at their first law degree-granting university or law school. To earn the Two-year J.D. degree, students must complete at least 60 credits while in residence at SLU Law.

Year One: Two-year J.D. students earn 29 credits by completing the same core curriculum courses as first-year students enrolled in the traditional three-year J.D. program. Those courses consist of Contracts, Torts, Civil Procedure, Property, Constitutional Law I, and Legal Analysis, Research and Communication.

Year Two: Two-year J.D. students earn at least 31 additional credits through required courses and electives. Required courses consist of a course in professional ethics, a seminar, and six credits of experiential courses. Electives may be chosen from any upper-division course or seminar offered at SLU Law.

Students planning to sit for a bar exam in the U.S. upon completion of the Two-year J.D. are strongly advised to enroll in the following recommended courses for bar-preparation purposes: Business Associations, Constitutional Law II, Criminal Procedure: Investigation, Evidence, Wills and Trusts. Students may choose to take up to six of their elective credits in upper-division courses in another school within the University, with the prior written approval of the director of the Two-year J.D. program and the dean of students.

Admission Requirements

To be eligible for admission, applicants must satisfy the following requirements:

- Hold a first degree in law from a university or law school outside of the United States that qualifies the applicant for bar admission in the home country
- Have outstanding academic credentials and demonstrated excellence in professional career activities

- Complete an application for admission to the J.D. program (<https://os.lsu.edu/Logon/Access.aspx>) and submit all supporting documentation required in such application (including official transcripts and diplomas, two letters of recommendation, professional resume and personal statement)
- Submit an official LSAT score reported within the past three years that demonstrates the potential to succeed in the program
- If the language of instruction in the applicant's first law degree program was other than English, demonstrate a high level of spoken and written English proficiency by submitting an official TOEFL report with a score of 100 or above or an official IELTS report with a score of 7.5 or above

Note that SLU Law requires the use of the LSAC Credential Assembly Service, including International Credential Evaluation, in submitting an application for admission to the Two-year J.D. for Foreign Lawyers. SLU Law requires that all documentation be submitted in English or with an English translation.

Application Deadline

Applications for the Two-year J.D. program are accepted on a rolling basis starting on Sept. 1 of each year for admission the following fall. Applications will not be reviewed until all required materials are received by SLU Law. Applications should be submitted by March 11 to ensure that visa paperwork can be processed in time for admission in the fall.
